The outfit drew comparisons to Jim Carrey's character in the film The Mask, as well as Cillian Murphy's in Oppenheimer. But it wasn't just her fashion choices that caught people's attention - plastic surgery experts like Dr. Sean McNally also took note.

Speaking exclusively to The Express, the board-certified plastic surgeon shared his thoughts on Melania's possible cosmetic procedures. He said: "For Melania, her jaw line in her side profile is absolutely snatched for someone who's 54."

However, he pointed out two details: "However, if you look real close there's 2 things to note. (1) Her earlobe has what we call a pixie shape. There appears to be a very faint light line just in front of her ear running down to the edge of her earlobe."

According to Dr. McNally, these signs could indicate a past mini facelift. He concluded by saying: "It's hard to tell if these are just natural findings for her since good side profile pictures of the First Lady without earrings or hair in the way are hard to come by."

While Melania's outfit certainly turned heads, Ivanka Trump's outfit for her father's inauguration has some thinking it's a bad omen.

The First Daughter has had some interesting looks for the inauguration festivities, like a custom Oscar de la Renta gown for the pre-inauguration dinner. She wore a beaded dress, which Trump spotted as a target image, as she mingled with the likes of Elon Musk and Jeff Bezos at the event.
